

YOUR KENYA SAFARI

Website Content Guide

Everything to put on the site — page by page, section by section — to turn browsers into booked guests.

Home · Destinations · Safaris · Pricing · Trust · Booking · SEO

How to use this guide

This is a content blueprint, not a design template. Each section below tells you what information to write, why it matters, and how travellers use it when deciding whether to book. Work through it top to bottom: the early pages (Home, Destinations, Safaris) win attention, and the later ones (Trust, Booking, Practical Info) close the sale. Where figures appear — park fees, entry rules, licensing — treat them as accurate at time of writing but always confirm the live numbers before you publish, because Kenya updates them regularly.

01 Homepage — the 6-second pitch

A visitor decides in seconds whether you look credible. Your homepage is a filter, not an encyclopaedia: say clearly what you offer, prove you're trustworthy, and give one obvious next step.

Put these blocks on the page, in this order

- Hero headline + one line. Name the destination and the feeling. e.g. "Private Kenya safaris, guided by people who grew up in the Mara." Avoid vague slogans like "Experience the magic."
- Hero image or short video. Real wildlife/landscape from your own trips — not obvious stock. One strong image beats a busy slideshow.
- Primary call-to-action (CTA). One button, repeated down the page: "Plan my safari" or "Get a free quote." Make enquiry frictionless.
- Trust bar. Immediately under the hero: TRA licence, KATO membership (once eligible), review score, years operating, number of guests hosted. This is where hesitation dies.
- Featured safaris (3–4). Cards with photo, name, duration, "from $X pp", one-line hook, and a "View itinerary" link.
- Why book with us (3–5 points). Private 4x4, expert local guides, tailor-made routes, honest pricing, responsible tourism.
- Social proof. 2–3 short guest quotes with name + country, plus logos of any review platforms (TripAdvisor, Google).
- Reassurance strip. Financial protection / bonding, flexible rebooking, 24/7 support in-country.
- Footer. Contact, WhatsApp, physical address in Kenya, licence numbers, policy links, social icons.

Conversion tip

Show a WhatsApp / phone contact prominently. A large share of safari enquiries come from travellers who want a quick human answer before committing to a big-ticket trip. Response speed is a competitive edge.

02 About Us — who's taking me into the bush?

Guests are trusting strangers with their safety, money and once-in-a-lifetime trip. The About page turns an anonymous website into real people. Write it in the first person and keep it human.

- Your story. Why you started, your connection to Kenya, what makes your safaris different.
- The team & guides. Photos and short bios of key guides — years of experience, languages, specialities (big cats, birding, photography). Guiding quality is what guests remember.
- Credentials. Company registration, TRA licence, KATO status, guide certifications (e.g. KPSGA bronze/silver/gold), insurance and bonding.
- Your promise. How you handle safety, vehicle standards, small group sizes, and fair pay for staff.
- Community & conservation. How your trips support local communities and wildlife — concrete, not slogans (conservancy fees paid, projects supported, local hiring).

Why guides sell safaris

On review sites, the single most-praised element of a safari is almost always the guide, by name. Featuring your guides as real, named experts — not faceless "professional drivers" — is one of the highest-impact things you can do on the whole site.

03 Safari packages & itinerary pages

Each safari needs its own page. This is where the buying decision happens, so give enough detail to picture the trip and the confidence to enquire. Use a consistent template for every itinerary.

Itinerary page template

- Title, duration, route. e.g. "7-Day Classic Kenya: Mara · Nakuru · Amboseli."
- At-a-glance box. Days/nights, parks, group type (private/small group), start & end point, "from $X per person," best months.
- Overview paragraph. Who it suits (families, honeymooners, photographers, first-timers) and the highlights.
- Day-by-day breakdown. Each day: route, park, morning/afternoon activities, accommodation, meals (B/L/D), approximate drive times.
- Map. A simple route map — hugely reassuring for people unfamiliar with Kenya's geography.
- What's included / excluded. Be explicit (see section 08).
- Accommodation on this trip. Named lodges/camps with photos and a tier label.
- Gallery. Real photos from this route.
- Pricing table. By season and group size, plus single supplement.
- Strong CTA. "Enquire about this safari" / "Customise this trip." Make clear itineraries are tailorable — most guests want tweaks.

Offer a spread of trip lengths & styles

Package type	Typical length	Who it's for
Short/taster (Mara or Amboseli)	2–3 days	Add-ons, tight schedules, budget
Classic multi-park	6–8 days	First-time safari-goers (most popular)
Grand tour / Migration special	10–14 days	Bucket-list, repeat travellers
Safari + beach (Diani/Watamu)	9–12 days	Honeymoons, families wanting downtime
Special interest	Varies	Photography, birding, conservation, cultural

04 Destinations — Kenya's parks & reserves

Give each major park its own page. Travellers research destinations before operators, so these pages are prime search-traffic magnets and let you show breadth. For each park cover: what it's famous for, best time to go, wildlife highlights, how to get there, and which of your safaris include it.

Park / Reserve	Known for	Peak season
Maasai Mara N.R.	Great Migration, big cats, classic savannah	Jul–Oct (river crossings)
Amboseli N.P.	Elephant herds, Mt Kilimanjaro backdrop	Jun–Oct, Jan–Feb
Tsavo East & West	Vast wilderness, red elephants, remote feel	Jun–Oct
Samburu N.R.	"Special Five" northern species, culture	Jun–Oct
Lake Nakuru N.P.	Rhino sanctuary, flamingos, easy day add	Year-round
Laikipia conservancies	Exclusive, rhino, walking & night drives	Jun–Oct, Dec–Mar
Nairobi N.P.	Wildlife by the city — perfect first/last day	Year-round
Diani / Watamu coast	Indian Ocean beaches, safari-and-sea combos	Dec–Mar, Jul–Oct

Conservancies vs. the reserve — explain the difference

Many guests don't know that the private conservancies bordering the Maasai Mara allow off-road driving, night drives and walking safaris that the main reserve does not, in exchange for higher nightly fees. A short explainer helps you upsell higher-margin trips and sets correct expectations.

05 Wildlife & signature experiences

Beyond "see animals," spell out the experiences. These make great standalone pages and add-on upsells, and they're exactly what people search for.

- The Big Five. Lion, leopard, elephant, buffalo, rhino — where in Kenya each is best seen.
- The Great Wildebeest Migration. What it is, the July–October Mara river-crossing window, and how to plan around it. This is Kenya's headline act — give it a dedicated page.
- Hot-air balloon safari. Sunrise over the Mara — a classic premium add-on.
- Guided game drives. Morning/afternoon/full-day; what a typical drive looks like.
- Walking & night safaris. Available in conservancies — a point of difference.
- Cultural visits. Maasai / Samburu village experiences done respectfully and fairly.
- Birding. Kenya has 1,000+ species — a strong niche for a dedicated audience.
- Photographic safaris. Specialist vehicles, bean bags, guides who understand light.

Set honest expectations

State plainly that wildlife is wild — sightings are never guaranteed. Travellers respect honesty, and it protects you from complaints. Pair it with what you can promise: expert guides, prime timing, and unhurried private game drives that maximise the odds.

06 Where guests sleep — accommodation tiers

Accommodation drives both price and dream factor. Show clear tiers so guests self-select a budget, and name specific properties on each itinerary with photos.

Tier	What it means	Rough $/pp/night*
Budget / camping	Public campsites, basic tented camps, shared facilities	Entry-level
Mid-range	Comfortable lodges & tented camps, en-suite, full board	Most popular
Luxury	Premium lodges, private conservancy camps, fine dining	Premium
Ultra-luxury / exclusive	Private villas, butler service, fly-in, all-inclusive	Top tier

Show real numbers once you've priced your suppliers — leave placeholders out of the live site.*

For each property you feature, include: photos (room + setting), location/park, board basis, standout features (pool, viewing deck, family rooms), and whether conservancy fees are bundled into the nightly rate.

07 When to visit — seasons & the Migration

A "best time to visit" page answers one of the most-searched safari questions and helps guests pick dates that suit their budget and goals.

Season	Months	What to expect
Long dry / high season	Jul–Oct	Migration in the Mara, best game viewing, priciest & busiest — book early
Short dry	Jan–Feb	Warm, dry, excellent viewing, calving in the south — great value
Long rains / green (low)	Mar–May	Lush, fewer crowds, lowest prices, lush landscapes, some wet roads
Short rains	Nov–Dec	Brief afternoon showers, good birding, shoulder pricing

Turn low season into a selling point

Frame the green season (Mar–May) positively: dramatic skies, newborn animals, migrant birds, far fewer vehicles at sightings, and the best prices of the year. Many photographers prefer it. Don't let your quietest months read as "avoid."

08 Pricing, inclusions & exclusions

Vague pricing kills trust. Even if final quotes are tailor-made, give clear "from" prices and spell out exactly what is and isn't included. Unexpected costs at the park gate are a top source of complaints — pre-empt them.

Typically INCLUDED	Typically EXCLUDED
Park & conservancy entry fees	International flights
Accommodation (stated board basis)	Kenya eTA & travel insurance
Private 4x4 + professional guide	Visas, vaccinations, meds
Game drives per itinerary	Tips/gratuities for guide & staff
Airport transfers	Drinks, laundry, personal items
Bottled water on drives	Balloon safari & optional extras

Park fees change often — build in a buffer

Government-set entry fees are revised regularly and vary by season, so keep them out of hard-coded prices where you can, or add a "fees correct at time of quoting" note. As an illustration of current non-resident day rates (per adult, always verify before publishing):

Park	Non-resident adult / day (illustrative)
Maasai Mara N.R.	Seasonal — roughly USD 100 low season / USD 200 peak (Jul–Dec); managed by Narok County, separate from KWS
Amboseli N.P. (KWS premium)	Around USD 90 adult / USD 45 child
Lake Nakuru N.P. (KWS premium)	Around USD 90 adult / USD 45 child
Samburu N.R.	Around USD 85 adult / USD 40 child
Private conservancy fees	Roughly USD 60–150 pp/day — often bundled into lodge rates

Note the Mara operates on a 12-hour ticket and is billed separately from KWS parks; these figures move — confirm with KWS and Narok County before quoting.

09 Booking, deposits & cancellation

Explain the booking journey step by step so it feels safe. Ambiguity here is the last thing standing between an interested traveller and a confirmed booking.

- How booking works. Enquire → receive a tailored quote & itinerary → confirm → pay deposit → balance due before travel → final documents.
- Deposit & payment terms. State the deposit % and when the balance is due. Industry norm is a deposit to confirm, with the balance settled ahead of arrival (operators commit funds to lodges and park bookings in advance).
- Accepted payment methods. Card, bank transfer, M-Pesa; currencies accepted.
- Cancellation & refund policy. Clear, tiered by how far out the cancellation falls. Publish it — don't bury it.
- Financial protection. Mention KATO bonding / your escrow or insurance arrangements so deposits feel safe.
- Rebooking flexibility. Post-pandemic, travellers strongly value flexible date changes — say so if you offer it.
- Written confirmation before payment. Promise an itemised confirmation (vehicle, guide, lodges, fees, transfers) before any deposit — this is a recognised trust signal in the Kenya market.

A red flag you can avoid

Experienced travellers are warned to never pay a deposit without a written, itemised trip confirmation. Make "we always confirm everything in writing first" an explicit selling point rather than something you do quietly.

10 Practical traveller info

A "know before you go" page reduces your support workload and builds confidence. Cover entry rules, health, money, safety and packing — and always point to official sources for anything that changes.

Entry: Kenya eTA

- Kenya replaced visas with an Electronic Travel Authorisation (eTA) from January 2024. Most visitors must apply online before travel at the official portal (etakenya.go.ke).
- Typical processing is a few working days — advise guests to apply at least a week ahead. The standard processing fee is around USD 30 (verify current amount).
- Note recent exemptions: from 2025, citizens of most African countries were added to the eTA-exempt list (with some exceptions). Always tell travellers to check their own nationality's current rules.
- Passport valid 6+ months with a blank page; onward/return ticket usually required.

Health, money & connectivity

- Health. Malaria prophylaxis commonly advised; yellow fever certificate required if arriving from an endemic country. Tell guests to consult a travel clinic 6+ weeks ahead. Don't give medical advice yourself — signpost to professionals.
- Money. Currency is the Kenyan Shilling (KES); USD widely accepted for tourism; M-Pesa mobile money is everywhere. Mention ATMs, tipping norms, and that some park gates are cashless.
- Connectivity. Note Wi-Fi availability at camps and mobile coverage on safari (patchy in remote areas — often a feature, not a bug).
- Electricity. 240V, UK-style three-pin plugs.

Packing list (guests love a checklist)

Neutral-coloured clothing, layers for cold mornings, hat & sunglasses, sunscreen, insect repellent, binoculars, camera + spare batteries/power bank, refillable water bottle, any personal medication, and a soft-sided bag (essential for fly-in safaris with strict luggage limits).

Safety

Reassure with specifics: professional guides, well-maintained 4x4s, park rules followed, 24/7 in-country support, and standard travel advisories. Recommend comprehensive travel insurance including medical evacuation as a booking condition.

11 Trust & credibility — the make-or-break page

A safari is a large, prepaid purchase from a company in another country, often booked months ahead. Trust is your single biggest conversion lever. Make credibility impossible to miss.

- TRA licence. A current Tourism Regulatory Authority licence is a legal requirement to operate in Kenya. Display the licence and offer to show it on request — savvy travellers check for it.
- KATO membership. The Kenya Association of Tour Operators is the leading trade body; membership includes a bonding scheme that protects client funds. You become eligible after operating for a year as a licensed operator — flag "KATO-bonded" the moment you qualify.
- Guide certification. KPSGA-graded guides (bronze/silver/gold) signal quality.
- Independent reviews. Link real TripAdvisor / Google / SafariBookings profiles. Third-party reviews outperform on-site testimonials for trust.
- Detailed testimonials. Name, country, trip taken, and a specific detail ("our guide Joseph spotted a leopard others missed").
- Responsible tourism. Conservation and community commitments — increasingly a deciding factor for travellers.
- Real contact details. Physical Kenyan address, phone, WhatsApp, registered company name & number.
- Secure site. HTTPS, a clear privacy policy, and secure payment handling.

The four checks experienced travellers make

Before booking any Kenya operator, seasoned guests are advised to verify four things: a current KATO registration, a valid TRA licence, verified third-party reviews, and written confirmation of all inclusions before any deposit. Design your site so a visitor can tick all four in under a minute.

12 FAQ — with starter questions

A good FAQ deflects repetitive enquiries and captures long-tail search traffic. Answer honestly and specifically. Starter questions to adapt in your own voice:

- Do I need a visa or eTA for Kenya, and how do I get one?
- When is the best time to see the Great Migration?
- Are your safaris private or shared group departures?
- What's included in the price — and what isn't?
- How much should I budget for tips?
- Is it safe? What happens in a medical emergency?
- What vaccinations or malaria precautions do I need?
- Can you tailor an itinerary to my dates, budget and interests?
- What deposit do you require, and what's your cancellation policy?
- Are your prices per person or per group? Is there a single supplement?
- What kind of vehicles do you use? Is there a window seat for everyone?
- How much luggage can I bring, especially on fly-in safaris?
- Do you cater for dietary requirements, families, or accessibility needs?
- Are wildlife sightings guaranteed?
- How do I pay, and is my money protected?

13 Contact & enquiry form fields

Your enquiry form is where money is made. Ask enough to write a great quote, but not so much that people abandon it. Suggested fields:

- Name, email, phone / WhatsApp (WhatsApp is huge for this market)
- Country of residence & nationality (affects fees and eTA)
- Preferred travel dates or month (and flexibility)
- Number of adults / children (+ children's ages)
- Trip length or specific package of interest
- Budget range or accommodation tier (budget / mid / luxury)
- Interests (Big cats, Migration, birding, photography, culture, beach add-on)
- Free-text "Tell us about your dream safari" box
- How they heard about you (helps you learn what marketing works)

Make contact effortless

Offer multiple channels — form, email, phone, and a one-tap WhatsApp button — and state your response time ("we reply within 24 hours"). Fast, human replies win bookings in a category where people are spending a lot and want reassurance.

14 SEO & blog content plan

Most safari-planning starts with a search months before booking. Publishing helpful articles earns free, high-intent traffic and builds authority. Aim for genuinely useful posts, updated yearly.

High-value article ideas

- Best time to visit Kenya for a safari (month-by-month)
- Great Migration guide: where and when to see the river crossings
- How much does a Kenya safari cost? An honest breakdown
- Maasai Mara vs. the conservancies: which is right for you?
- First safari? A complete beginner's planning guide
- What to pack for a Kenya safari (printable checklist)
- Kenya eTA explained: how to apply, step by step
- Family safaris in Kenya: is it safe, and what ages work?
- Safari + beach: combining the Mara with Diani or Watamu
- Responsible safari: how to travel without harming wildlife

On-page SEO basics

- One clear target phrase per page (e.g. "7-day Kenya safari"); use it in the title, URL and headings.
- Descriptive, keyword-aware page titles and meta descriptions.
- Compress images and add descriptive alt text (also improves accessibility).
- Fast, mobile-first pages — most safari research happens on phones.
- Internal links between destinations, itineraries and blog posts.
- Google Business Profile + consistent name/address/phone across the web.

15 Legal / policy pages you must have

These protect you and are increasingly expected (and, for data/consent, legally required). Have a professional review the booking terms — this list is a starting point, not legal advice.

- Terms & Conditions of booking — deposits, balances, changes, liability, force majeure.
- Cancellation & refund policy — clear, tiered, easy to find.
- Privacy policy — how you collect and use data (Kenya's Data Protection Act; plus GDPR if you market to the EU/UK).
- Cookie consent — a compliant banner defaulting to the privacy-protective option.
- Travel insurance requirement — state that comprehensive cover (incl. medical evacuation) is required.
- Website terms of use & accessibility statement.
- Licence & registration details — company number, TRA licence, KATO status in the footer.

16 Pre-launch checklist

Tick these off before you go live:

- Homepage with clear hero, value proposition and one primary CTA
- Trust bar visible above the fold (licence, KATO, reviews, years operating)
- About page with your story and named, photographed guides
- At least 4–6 itinerary pages using a consistent template + route maps
- A page for each major park/destination you cover
- "Best time to visit" and Great Migration pages
- Accommodation tiers explained; named properties with photos
- Transparent pricing with clear inclusions/exclusions
- Park-fee note with a "verify at time of booking" disclaimer
- Booking process, deposit terms and cancellation policy published
- Practical info: eTA, health, money, packing, safety — with links to official sources
- Enquiry form + prominent WhatsApp / phone contact
- Independent review links (TripAdvisor / Google) live
- Responsible-tourism / conservation statement
- All legal pages: T&Cs, privacy, cookies, refund policy
- HTTPS enabled, mobile-tested, fast-loading, image alt text added
- Every fee, entry rule and licence detail re-verified against official sources
- Contact details, company number and licence numbers in the footer

One rule above all

Anything on your site that a guest relies on — park fees, eTA rules, what's included, your licence status — must be accurate and current. In this business, trust is the product. Re-check the moving numbers on a schedule, and your website will keep earning bookings long after launch.
